UNIVERSITY OF NEBRASKA – MCGOOGAN LIBRARY Omaha, Nebraska

The Leon S. McGoogan Health Sciences Library supports the academic, research, and patient care programs of The University of Nebraska Medical Center (UNMC). The McGoogan Library, located in Wittson Hall, is one of the nation's major health science libraries and serves the information needs of UNMC students, faculty, and staff, as well as licensed Nebraska health professionals and residents of the state. The library provides timely access to high quality collections of print and electronic materials and promotes the development of information management skills that support lifelong learning. The library completed a renovation in 2020, and now offers 24/7 access, 54 individual and group study rooms, a Maker Studio, an EZ Studio, conference rooms and classrooms equipped with advanced technology, and student and public workstations. ¹

The McGoogan Library also houses a rare book collection of more than 4,250 volumes valued at $3.4 million. With some books dating back to the 1490s, the library's rare book collection is considered one of the best in the nation. ²
